

Chalkboard Grammar Review— Parts of Speech

1st Semester Exam

I am interested in the history of magic.

Anthropologists think ancient civilizations believed in magic.

Didn't the ancient Egyptians create amulets for magical purposes.

Pass me that book about alchemists in the Middle Ages.

In other times, thousands of people were accused of being witches and executed.

What strange times those must have been!

Have advances in science weakened belief in magic?

Do superstitions indicate a belief in magic?

Please tell me what you think.

How puzzling some superstitions are!

During this time of year, the weather often becomes stormy in the late afternoon.

My voice sounds hoarse from all that cheering at the game.

The salesperson seemed annoyed by the shoppers who crowded the store.

The captain of the ship acted calmly in the storm.

This fabric turned white from exposure to the sun.

DO you know whether the library is open on Saturdays?

The lights grew dimmer in the theater.

The tourists were curious about the mysterious cave.

A few of the tomatoes on the vines are already ripe.

I absolutely love this movie!

Our first island adventure was a visit to a coral reef.

The island air smelled fresh and clean.

Islanders were selling fresh papayas.

During a hike in the mounts, I observed many kinds of wildlife.

The tropical vegetation was remarkable.

I saw bananas, coconuts, and papayas there.

Most of the islands' inhabitants are Polynesian.

Tahiti is certainly an extraordinary part of the world.

Our vacation in the Society Islands was too short.

This trip remains my all-time favorite vacation.
